

1. The first bar represents the total number of people who are currently employed in the United States. This bar is the longest, indicating the highest number of people in the workforce.

2. The second bar represents the number of people who are currently unemployed in the United States. This bar is significantly shorter than the first bar, indicating a smaller number of people without jobs.

3. The third bar represents the number of people who are currently in the labor force. This bar is shorter than the first bar but longer than the second bar, indicating a moderate number of people who are either employed or unemployed.